Real Knowledge in the Google Era

- America's bloated textbooks gallop students through mind-numbing topics....student will need "portable skills"--critical thinking, making connections between ideas and knowing how to keep on learning.

What It Means to Be a Global Student

- Jobs in the new economy - ones that won't get outsourced or automated - put an enormous premium on creative and innovative skills. Will your child be ready for the 21st Century?

Learning 2.0 and New Kind of Literacy

- Only 50% of High School Seniors could judge the objectivity of a website.

About Alan November

Alan November is recognized internationally as a leader in education technology. Alan is a whirlwind of big ideas and provocative questions. He thrives on confirming and challenging educators' thoughts about what's possible in the world of teaching and learning. More than anything, he is a teacher at heart, with a wealth of experience teaching students at all levels. He has since been a director of an alternative high school, computer coordinator, technology consultant, and university lecturer. As practitioner, and author, Alan has guided schools, government organizations and industry leaders as they plan to improve quality with technology.

Alan is well known for applying his humor and wit to inspire us to think about applying technology to improve learning. He has delivered keynote presentations and workshops in all fifty states, in every province in Canada, and throughout the UK, Europe and Asia.

Alan was named one of the nation's 15 most influential by Classroom Computer Learning Magazine. Alan was co-founder of the Stanford Institute for Educational Leadership Through Technology and is most proud of being selected as one of the original five national Christa McAuliffe Educators.
